A SEAMAN named Gastirl Hossein, employed on board the S.S. Geelong, was brought before Mr Wodehouse, in the Police Court this morning, charged with assaulting James tenced to pay a fine of 85.

An assault case of a somewhat unusua character came before Mr Wodehouse, in the Police Court this morning. Guilhermins F. Cordeiro, a widow, complained that Luiz Maurico de Leinos Barreto, who, it appeared, is her brother-in-law, assaulted her on the street on Sunday last. stated that while on her way-home from Mass in the morning she stood to speak to a lady friend and while she was talking felt somebody pushing her veil. On turning she saw the defendant and asked him what was the matter. He said she had been insulting his niece. The complainant replied that she was merely talking to her friend. She saw the niece-referred to (who is her niece also) when she furned round, but had not noticed her before. The complainant further stated that the defendant did not strike her; the assault simply consisted in his pushing her veil. The case was remanded till to-morrow.

With all the endeavours now being made to improve the buildings and maire tenements; a proposal to grant short leases seems preeminently absurd. The instance quoted by our contemporary-namely, that of Bombay-is not applicable to this Colony. So far as we can discover, the great lack ofhouse accommodation felt in Bombay for the lower class Indians led to the suggestion that a system of short leases, battered, for the purpose of constructing cheap houses for the natives. If this be so, it is a very different matter from the statement made by the writer in the Press, that 'in Bombay public lands are let on leases of fifty years, and the system has proved highly advantageous.' THE POPULATION OF CHINA, AT DIFFERENT PERIODS. Translated from a document emanating from the Board of Revenue.

The N. C. Daily News gives a translation of some very interesting statistics with regard to the population of China, which it prefixes with the following remarks :-The work of Multhur on population, written at the beginning of this century. indicates immense research and extreme caution on the part of the author in arrivng at conclusions. Darwin confesses his obligations to it, and the philosophic spirit which animates it as shewn in the attent scarching out of the causes; affecting the growth and decay of population in various countries, explains Darwin's admiration, The three causes which according to Malthus have led to an immense population in China are the fertility of the soil, the encouragement given to agriculture and the practice of early marriages. He makes some mistakes, as when he says that in fanticide is permitted; but those who know China best will make no objection to the opinion of this writer that these three causes have had great influence in swelling | Tuble of population of China in each year to pray, but the right temple and god have matter is engaging the attention of the the number of the inhabitants of this country. He mentions as checks to population, droughts, hurricgnes, wars locusts and disease, as also the employ ment of great quantities of grain -in distillerics. He derived his information from Duhalde, Amyot, and other Jesuit writers on China, as might be expected from the accuracy of his views. an elaborate chapter in Williams' Middle Kingdom' on the population of Chine which contains many valuable hints and facts. We are now able to add some tables which the reader will find on another page. They consist of a new table from the Board of Revenue, and another new table just published in Russian from another-official source. Both these tables give the numbers arrived at by a recent census of the greater part of the empire. Beside Chan Utong was charged with larceny, speculation, same sometimes from the ce- dinary degree from them, and certainly these, there is a table of the taxpaying Population of China in each year of deep and the populace are living huddled and largeny in a dwelling-house, it being quest of Viceroy Li of Tientsin, or from mere | without contracting cholera On the other population of the empire for each year together in huts on the city wall. The causes of increase are always at work, the thoroughness of the agriculture, the fertility of the soil, the anxiety of parents to see their sons married by the time they are eighteen, the willingness of the women to be married at seventeen or thereabouts, and become domestic drudges in their husband's home for the first few years of married life; the equality of sons as heirs-to property, the thriftyhabits of the people, and their adaptability to a variety of occupations requiring skill and industry. CHANG'S RECOMMENDATION Visitors to Nan-kow, en route for the Great Wall, invariably find thomselves confronted by a young man of medium size soiled person, and oily manners, who, for a consideration, will conduct the traveller through the pass to the Wall or back to the fitness, he draws from his bosom a handful. of testimonials written by previous trav vellers, each one of whom seems to have striven to describe our friend as he is not rather than as he is. The reading of these less inns at the entrance to the pass. One of the best of these is good enough to deserve a wider reading by a fun-loving public, and is reproduced here :-The bearer Chang-I knownot what besides-A prince of men and parugon of guides; For twenty pieces will your donkey drive, And may perhaps be beaten down to five: A man of taste among a people rude, In form Apolls, and in dress a dude. All modern tongues he can both read and speak, up, in Sanskirt and excels in Greek. To soothe his labour and sesque his toil. He skotches: draws in exfors, paints, and oil: He plays the violin, likewise the tyre. His vocal range is couble C ar higher. Ge- and The-ology are his delight. And other ologies I cannot write.

His circumambient greatness (so to speak) Will only be exceeded by his cheek!
